NAUTICAL INFORMATION

During the night, the navigation will continue on a southeast course, passing north of the Mona Passage, a 60-nautical-mile-wide strait that separates the islands of Hispaniola and Puerto Rico. In the morning, we will begin our approach to the Puerto Rican coast, and after embarking the port pilot, who will assist us during the docking maneuver, we will enter the port waters. At the port entrance, on the left side of the ship, you can admire the iconic San Felipe del Morro fortress. San Juan is the capital and largest city of Puerto Rico, located on the northern coast of the island, and is bordered to the north by the waters of the Atlantic Ocean. Later in the evening, after undocking and disembarking the pilot, we will leave the Puerto Rican coast, setting a northwest course toward Ocean Cay.
